A Message from John Torell - San Diego City Auditor, 2005-2007

These past few years, I have discussed the importance of auditor independence. I have also referred to other community members and city officials who agree with this position. Perhaps one of the more prominent officials, due to his close relationship to this issue, is our former City Auditor, John Torell. As you may remember, Mr. Torell resigned from his position under the Strong Mayor form of government, following what he felt was inappropriate pressure from the Mayor's management team to modify his professional opinion to paint a different picture of the City's financial wellbeing and internal controls. Please see the message below from John Torell regarding his opposition to Prop C.

Sincerely,
Donna Frye

The concept of an auditor's independence is an essential element in the Codes of Ethics of both the accounting and auditing professions.

An auditor's 'stock-in-trade' is her or his opinion. The value of that opinion depends upon the auditor's objectivity. The auditor's objectivity depends upon the auditor's independence within the organization. To the extent that an auditor's opinion is less than objective, the value and reliability of that opinion is diminished.

In practice, the auditor's independence provides an environment of 'checks and balances', helping to ensure that policy makers and the public are given unbiased data and other information needed to make informed decisions.

The concept of 'checks and balances' is diminished at least perceptively, and often in reality, when the organization's CEO hires the auditor or plays an influential role in selecting candidates for the position.

As the former San Diego City Auditor, my statutory responsibilities included rendering an annual opinion on the adequacy of the City controls over financial reporting. My ability to express that opinion was severely curtailed after the 'strong mayor' form of government was implemented.

As the Auditor, I now worked for the mayor and was told I needed to be a 'team player'. The conflict between this concept and the auditor's code of professional ethics was the reason I resigned from City employment.

The objectivity, honesty, and the openness that results from the City Auditor being free from the fear of retaliation by the mayor's office serves not only to benefit the City organization, but ultimately serves the best interests of the taxpayers. The auditor needs to be able to express her or his opinion free from the political influence and pressures of the city administration. The people of the City of San Diego deserve no less.

Don't be fooled by Proposition C. It is a veiled attempt by the mayor's office to maintain control over the selection and supervision of the City Auditor. Only an Auditor free from the political pressures of the mayor's office can serve the City and its citizens as an effective watchdog.

For the sake of the Auditor and for the sake of the City, Vote NO on C.

Signed,
John Torell

So Many Ways to Celebrate River Days!

The San Diego River Park Foundation is a non-profit organization dedicated to creating a park system along the historic 52-mile long San Diego River, and making it clean and healthy for all to enjoy into the future.

The Foundation has organized San Diego River Days in partnership with more than 30 groups, organizations and agencies. River Days is an opportunity for you to experience the San Diego River unlike you have ever done before.

From mountain hikes to beach clean-ups, from festivals to nature walks, we invite you to join us for one or more events as we celebrate the San Diego River. There are plenty of opportunities to explore, discover, enjoy special events and volunteer during this two week celebration! Below, you can find listings of District Six events in each of these categories:

Holmes Elementary Hawkeyes are HERO's!

On April 11th, Councilmember Frye and several honored guests participated in the 2nd annual HERO (Holmes Education Run Off) Run for Holmes Elementary School. Councilmember Frye was excited to visit her alma mater and see all the changes that have occurred since her days on campus.

The event helps the School raise money for major improvements to the campus that otherwise wouldn't be paid for by the School District. To date, the 2008 HERO Run has already raised in excess of $32,000 for Holmes PTA, and the pledges are still coming in! Thirty-six corporate sponsors provided Holmes with monetary contributions and 29 local businesses supported the event with product or service donations such as the refreshments for participants (water, oranges, muffins) and lunch for volunteers. Several other community members and parents donated their time or services such as photo and videography, event preparation, event day design and logistics, fitness expertise and much more. In the end, the day came together because of the generosity of dedicated parents and volunteers.

Councilmember Frye wants to congratulate all the runners and all of the parents for participating in making this years event such a success!

Councilmember Frye and Principal Brown initiated the Run by calling all the students out to the field.

Frye Recognizes Local Resource's Efforts in Advocacy

On March 28, 2008, Councilmember Frye presented the Arc of San Diego with a proclamation in recognition of March being Disability Awareness Month. She presented the proclamation to John McKee, Director of the North Shores Facility, as well as Miguel Orozco, an Arc program participant who was elected as the Mayor of the North Shores Facility.

The Arc of San Diego provides many services to a large range of developmentally disabled individuals, from teaching basic self-care skills to vocational skills. Councilmember Frye is pleased to have this wonderful resource in District Six, and thanks the dedicated staff and volunteers for their hard work.

ORGANIZATIONS PARTNER TO PROTECT SAN DIEGO RIVER WATERSHED

April 16, 2008, the San Diego River Conservancy (SDRC) and the San Diego River Park Foundation (SDRPF) partnered with San Diego State University to create a broad range program to enhance and preserve one of the region's most important watersheds. A formal signing event took place on Friday, April 18th along the banks of the San Diego River, within Mission Trails Regional Park, at the site of the Old Mission Dam.

Participants in the ceremony included SDSU President Stephen Weber, San Diego Mayor Jerry Sanders, State Senator Christine Kehoe, San Diego Councilmember Donna Frye, SDRC Executive Director Mike Nelson and SDRPF Executive Director Rob Hutsell. Also on hand were representatives of SDSU's Field Stations Program, who provide support for the project through education, research, conservation and technology.

"The San Diego River has long served our community, from the Native Americans who first settled along its banks to those of us today who still appreciate its beauty," said Weber. "We look forward to an active role in monitoring and improving the health of this important resource. It is a privilege to help to preserve the river for future generations of San Diegans."

Following the signing of a memorandum of understanding between the partners, field biologists from SDSU and the High-Performance Wireless Research & Education Network (HPWREN) demonstrated one of the first of many partnership projects – a high-speed, wireless sensor network that will provide remote monitoring throughout the river watershed. Ultimately, this project will represent the largest such waterway monitoring network in the United States, collecting long-term, real-time data on water quality, flooding, and changes in the ecosystem.

"This system will be similar to the one we pioneered in our Santa Margarita Ecological Reserve," explained Matt Rahn, director of SDSU's Field Stations Program. "It will have many important uses, including the ability to assess the real-time effects of fire, landslide, chemical contamination or flooding, to help responders make swift and effective responses to such occurrences."

Over centuries of human use and abuse, the natural functions of the San Diego River and its watershed have been severely altered. It is the aim of the partnership to re-establish the river's viability, by retaining access to those seeking responsible recreational and educational access.

In Honor of Lowell Farris

Lowell Farris, a dedicated Serra Mesa resident and volunteer, regularly visited the bus stop at Sharp Hospital to pick up trash and cut the weeds around the area. He noticed the unkempt and unsheltered bus stop and felt strongly that people coming and leaving the hospital should not have to stand in the hot sun or in the rain. Lowell felt so strongly about this issue, he brought his concerns before the Metropolitan Transit District, the City and Sharp Hospital. Lowell persisted in his lobbying, and a sheltered bus stop was finally included the hospital's remodeling plans.

Councilmember Frye said a few words to kick-off the dedication ceremony. Mrs. Kathy Farris, is seated to Councilmember Frye's right.

On Saturday, March 22, the Serra Mesa community celebrated the dedication of the "new" sheltered bus stop in memory of Lowell Farris, with the installation of a plaque that reads: "This shelter is dedicated in memory and honor of Lowell Farris, who saw the need for a 'sheltered' bus stop & worked tirelessly until it became a reality. March 22, 2008." The plaque is located at Health Center Drive and Frost Street.

CHILDREN'S EDUCATIONAL SPACE AT SERRA MESA-KEARNY MESA BRANCH LIBRARY

Project sponsored by First Five Commission of San Diego and administered by City of San Diego

The Serra Mesa-Kearny Mesa Library is anticipated to be home to a new educational space especially designed for children ages 0-5, and their parents/caregivers. Artists Kipp Kobayashi, Noel Korten and child care expert Donna Beveridge were selected by Rusty Coombs, the library's architect, with a panel of community members, visual arts and child care experts to create a space for educational opportunities and activities that promote "school readiness" for young children.

Since being selected for the project, the team has been working on an innovative concept for a fantastical space within the library's perimeter. Key goals of the design are stimulating imagination and engaging children in multiple, open-ended activities that can be experienced and talked about with their parents/caregivers; creating a world where children can pretend and explore; and providing opportunities to discover images within patterns, and create sounds either solo, or in concert with others. These and other activities will connect to books and other literature available to children and parents/caregivers in the library.

The team recently presented their concept to members of the Serra Mesa and Kearny Mesa communities and gathered feedback and ideas. Based on the input from the community, several elements of the conceptual design are being modified. For example, the "mast" sculpture proposed for placement at the library's entrance will be relocated or removed from the design. The team will present their revised design at a public meeting in early summer. The estimated completion date for the educational space is fall 2009.

For more information about this project, please call Kristin or Lisa at (619) 236-6616.

Jewish Family Services San Diego

Jewish Family Service of San Diego was founded in 1918 by a consortium of women's clubs who sought to address the myriad of human needs of the times. Today, JFS is a comprehensive social service organization with nine locations throughout San Diego County and an office in Palm Desert, serving the Coachella Valley. From its early grassroots origins, the agency now serves over 20,000 people annually.

They offer programs such as crisis intervention, immigration/resettlement counseling, mentoring program, older adults/senior services, parenting classes, school based and special needs programs, support groups, training and education and much more! With numerous locations in the City, and a District Six location at 8804 Balboa Avenue, Jewish Family Services is a wonderful place for all residents to find assistance, resources, or just a new connection.

In May, Jewish Family Services invites all current caregivers to attend two free nights of relaxing, socializing, and learning about the many options and resources available to San Diego caregivers. Join them for two free dinners and meet others who understand the joys and challenges of caregiving, and learn about the concept of Caregiver Respite Cooperative. Dinners will take place on Thursday, May 8, and Monday, May 19, 2008 from 6:00 - 9:00 pm. Participants must attend both evenings and pre-screening is necessary. Free transportation and free professional home care is available. Space is very limited so please RSVP by May 5, 2008. To RSVP or for more information, please contact (858) 637-3229.

Also, the 5th Annual Mental Health Luncheon, hosted by the Mental Health Committee will be held on Wednesday, May 28, 2008. The event is held in support of mental health awareness and this year's luncheon features author Elyn R. Saks, JD. Diagnosed with paranoid schizophrenia, Saks has managed her illness and remained productive despite her struggles to sort what is real from what is not. Her book, The Center Cannot Hold: My Journey Through Madness, was named Time Magazine's Top 10 Nonfiction Books for 2007 and is "a stereotype-shattering look at a tenacious woman whose brain is her best friend and her worst enemy." Throughout her history as an honor student at Yale Law School and associate dean and professor at University of Southern California Gould School of Law, she has been hospitalized, restrained, force-fed medication, and given a "grave" prognosis.

These are sure to be two very eye-opening events! Visit the Jewish Family Services website at www.jfssd.org for information on more programs and services.
